Singapore REITs Outlook

Singapore REITs – Nexus of Peaking US Inflation, China Reopening

At the Federal Reserve meeting in December 2022, Chairman Jerome Powell signaled that interest rates would be held at a higher level for a longer period to combat inflation. Importantly, the Federal Reserve raised its unemployment forecast for the US economy to 4.6% from the current 3.7% in November, signaling its willingness to slow the economy in order to combat inflation⁶.

Equity markets are also shifting its narrative from inflation towards a global slowdown. As financial markets start looking ahead into 2023 and shift expectations towards a global slowdown, we can expect interest in the Singapore REIT space as a defensive asset class to resume. Singapore REITs are now looking attractive, especially for equity investors looking to reduce risk in preparation for a potential global economic slowdown.

In addition, while the US is bracing for an economic slowdown, China is likely to experience growth as the economy reopens with travel restrictions easing. China's post-pandemic recovery in 2023 is expected to be a tailwind for Singapore, as spillover demand from business and consumer travel will likely benefit Singapore's economy. Therefore, we believe that the Singapore REITs space is well placed for 2023 at the nexus of global financial flows seeking a defensive asset class and bottom-up fundamental improvement from China reopening demand.

Fundamental Recovery

The bottom-up fundamentals for the Singapore REIT sector is on the uptrend. The post pandemic recovery in the Singapore economy has been translating into positive rental recoveries across the REIT space. With supply remaining tight, commercial landlords are in a good position to raise rents. In the first 9 months of 2022, prime Orchard retail rents were up 1.7% to S$35.90 per square-foot per month (psf pm) while suburban retail rents rose 1.3% to S$23.09 psf pm, with the recovery in tenant sales to about 10% above pre-COVID levels. The hospitality market has performed better than expected with October revenue-per-available-room (RevPAR) rising to S$239, which is 125% of pre-COVID levels despite tourist arrivals volumes only at 51% of the 2019 monthly average⁷.

Therefore, such evidence of improving fundamentals contrast with increasing concerns of a global slowdown and strengthens the Singapore REIT sector as a steady and defensive asset class. Apart from rising inflation and interest rates, the world is facing other challenges such as armed conflicts and other geopolitical and social tensions. Singapore's status as a safe haven has improved since the pandemic amidst the chaos and volatility around the world.
